VOCATIONAL HIGH SCHOOL

DEDICATION

As we graduates go forth into the world in this June of 1945, we are being given a chance to prove the worth of our training at the East New York Vocational High School. Since the days of the pioneers, the homely toil of the man who labors with his hands has been the glory of America. We, too, have learned to build things with our hands. We, too, must devote our skill to the service of our country and to the casting of our own lives in a straight and sturdy mould. Of great value has been the education we have received here. To make it live in real and lasting achievement is now our problem and our privilege. To the school which has trained us so well, and to whose honored name we shall ever strive to bring credit, we affectionately dedicate this yearbook.

GRADUATES:

A school's success is measured by the success in life of each of the pupils who pass thru its portals. Many of the previous graduates have kept us informed of their successes, their failures, their pleasures and their sorrows. By means of the information obtained from its graduates, a school improves.

Now you are breaking the tie to your high school. Most of you will go forth to make your own way in life. You have the equipment. You know how to operate it. The road is open. May you always move ahead. It is our wish that each of you reach his or her goal.

Congratulations.

Sincerely yours,

J. RITCHIE STEVENSON
Principal

Aviation

THREE LONG YEARS AGO, a group of eager, ambitious boys arrived at the main building of East New York with but one desire—to become expert aviation mechanics and perhaps eventually pilots.

It took us a few days to find our way around the building and to learn all the tricks of the trade. Soon, however, we felt like old timers, and when we entered the fourth term, we were able to look down on the new comers from our superior heights.

The engine work we encountered in fifth term seemed at first fairly simple. We hadn't realized how our appearance would suffer as a result of the grease. But speaking of appearance, we weren't allowed to forget it for a moment when we met Mr. Migge in the sixth term welding shop. Woe betide any of us who appeared without a tie!

Our last summer vacation ended in a happy note, surprisingly enough, for our hopes of years were at length realized and we were returning as seniors. Seventh termers, it's true, but entitled to wear the buttons of our rank and feeling terribly sorry for ourselves when we weren't able to buy the huge ones because of the shortage of metal. This term, we again worked on fittings with varying degrees of success until finally January thirtieth arrived and we reached the last milestone.

Of course, at that stage of our careers, we felt that our diplomas were practically in our hands and that we could just sail along blithely, concentrating on the social rather than the scholastic aspects of life. What a rude awakening! Probably never in our high school years did we work so hard. There's no question now about our diplomas being hard earned. But it wasn't all grind and there were plenty of funny episodes to break the monotony.

Oh, well, it's all but over now! In a few short weeks, we'll be taking our places in the world and, we hope, filling them competently and happily because of our experience and training at East New York.

Electrical

JUST three short years ago, in September of '42, East New York was blessed with the arrival of the zaniest, wittiest and cleverest class ever to enter its portals. It seems like yesterday that we first entered this mighty structure, where knowledge and contentment revolve like the ever-moving hands of a grandfather's clock. When we came, others went, and as we go, others will come to take our places. But we are content with the knowledge that we have left our mark.

East New York will never forget us. Our championship teams, cheered on to victory by enthusiastic crowds of solid supporters, will always linger in the memory of those who knew us. Often did we taste defeat, but never were we humbled. Always we came back fighting, and never for a moment did our opponents lack respect for us. Each term, our teams brought added glory to East New York. Our trophies in the hall showcases are proof of that.

Scholastically we also led the pack. Never for an instant did we falter on the road to knowledge. No field was too vast to conquer, no task too difficult to perform. Our membership in the Honor Society is a shining example of our success in academic ways. Perfection is their aim, and work is a joy rather than a burden.

Of course, there were many times when school was pretty difficult and when the teachers seemed to get a bit "out of hand," despite our best efforts to manage them. Homework and marks were their weapons, and they were experts with them. But, to be honest, we also remember the days when the teachers showed themselves to be "pretty good guys." Those were the days when school was a joy and the hours flew by.

But the hours turned into months and the months into years, and here we are, ready to leave. We all stand on the threshold of days more significant than school days can ever be. Nevertheless, we shall never forget our Alma Mater and everything that she signifies in our lives. The poet never said truer words than, "Parting is such sweet sorrow!" GERALD ROSENTHAL, 8E12

Commercial

IN the year nineteen hundred forty-one, a group of brave young warriors, now known as 8C set out to win the battle of a high school education. The roads we trudged were long, hard and wearying. Many of those who started with us fell along the way. They lacked weapons strong enough to last them to the end. We who still remain are proud for at last we can see our victory close at hand.

Throughout our course, we had plenty of experience in our chosen field. When there was secretarial work to be done, 8C was usually called upon. Many of the mimeographed sheets used in class as well as notices and bulletins were prepared by our girls.

But all was not school work. Our war activities went hand in hand with our scholastic pursuits. We like to feel that our special efforts in bond and stamp sales may help to bring victory closer. The 8C girls worked in defense offices, in hospitals, at the C.D.V.O. and also took the places of more experienced workers who were drafted into service. We can remember, too, helping Miss Bellin plan and carry out an interesting bazaar, the proceeds of which went to the Allied War Relief.

It was during our four years that the Intercultural Committee of Teachers started its work in the school. This term it planned Brotherhood Week and Negro Week programs. We are grateful that we had the opportunity of participating in these activities before we left the school.

In our class, we are fortunate in having many talented girls. Ernestine Todd is the school Poet Laureate whose poems we have always enjoyed reading. In addition, she was vice-president of the school during sixth term and did much for the girls. Mary Timm, our songbird, won first prize in a radio singing contest and is an outstanding member of the school Choral Club. Shirley Neidoff, with the aid of Lt. Dounn, was one of the first girls to start the cheering squad that has been so effective in cheering our boys on to victory in the games. The Davis Twins are the creators of many of the artistic posters on the third floor.

Now, however, our task is done. Our troubles and fears lie behind us. Our goal has been reached. Proudly we stand, the 8C Army at the climax of our struggle—graduation—with the reward of a four year course, a high school diploma.

Dressmaking

AT LONG LAST our four years of high school have come to an end. Regretfully we, the dressmaking graduates of 1945, look back upon those four years and wonder where they have fled, for those final years of school life are what we remember most.

As we began our freshman year with the black clouds of war hovering overhead, when the tragic blow was dealt on Pearl Harbor, it was only natural for us to become interested in war work. We did our utmost to sell war bonds and stamps. We knitted afghans, did Red Cross work, aided scrap drives, sent packages overseas and even had a pin-up contest for our favorite servicemen. In our Power Operating class we made garments for neighboring hospitals and clothing for the poor and war-torn refugees. This training helped us to make professional garments and also taught us to be charitable, helpful and considerate of our fellow men.

A glow of pride fills each member of our class whenever we hear references to the fashion show that took place during our sixth term. We worked like busy bees to make it the success it was.

Another memorable event was the Christmas party of our last year at East New York. Who in 8TD can ever forget it? The spirit that prevailed there was one which has been with us for four years and which we expect to take with us into the business world and into our alumnae group.

Many of our boys and girls learned to dance and became social successes through our efforts in starting a dancing club. Our requests for this club were granted this term, thanks to the teachers who so willingly gave their time after school.

But now all these things are happy recollections for us. As we graduate we are proud to have received the finest education possible and to have had the guidance and instruction of the best teachers. We have spent four pleasant years at East New York Vocational High School and our gratitude can be shown only by our living up to the ideals and training we have acquired here.

Glider

AS GRADUATION NEARS and we are about to go forth into a world at war, we pause to look back on our pleasant school days. Almost three years ago, when we first feasted our eyes upon East New York, we were awed at the sight of the various shops with their complicated machines. Now, sophisticated seniors, with plenty of practical experience behind us, we are ready and eager to take our places in industry or the armed forces.

It seems such a short while ago that we were freshmen just out of junior high school walking through the halls of East New York when the bell rang for a change of periods. Little did we realize that instead of going to the third floor which was our destination, we would end up in the cafeteria.

Seniors here, seniors there, seniors all around! It looked as though they were trying to subjugate the poor unfortunate third termers. At first we tried to adapt ourselves to the idea that the seniors were lords and masters. But gradually we became adjusted and able to take care of our rights.

A year passed quickly and we were in fifth term. Until then we had had rather vague ideas of homework but then things began to happen as though Stukas were diving all around dropping their bombs of destruction — homework in English, math, science, economics! What had we done to deserve such a fate as this?

Many of us, alas, spent part of the seventh term in Mr. Garity's office. Gee, what a wonderful man he is, so straight and tall with a dignified look. We can still feel his friendly hand on our shoulders and hear his "What have you done now?" in a gruff but friendly tone.

The eighth term which was going to be our paradise-in-the-sun now became a synonym for an obstacle course for Marines training for overseas duty. But soon graduation day will be here and the piece of paper for which we worked so hard will be in our possession representing the fulfillment of our dreams and ambitions. And East New York will be but a happy memory.

Machine Shop

ON that memorable day, September 11, 1942, we walked slowly and timidly through the halls of East New York to start our new careers. We had high ideas of becoming machinists until Mr. Hilgard's talk, and then many of us wondered if we were good enough to become plumbers. As we entered the portals of E. N. Y. that day, we marvelled at the beauty and grace of the building. A few days afterwards we "tightened our belts" as we sought to conquer the gray, sinister machines, as well as Miss Gillespie's War Vocabulary.

What a thrill it was to turn in our first jobs—only to return to our benches dismayed by the first encounter with that famous and well-worn handbook, "Hilgard's Bible!" However, in spite of everything we succeeded in mastering the early stages of thread cutting, tool bit grinding, etc. As our freshman year drew to a close, we worked in the intense heat of Old Sol, for it was against the well-known Code of Ethics to loosen a collar button, or tie.

Then came the fifth and sixth terms. We breathed a little easier now, for we could not be looked down on as lowly freshies. We walked about with an air of self-confidence, as though the "Battle of E. N. Y." were half won. Little did we dream that our greatest trials and tribulations lay before us—tortures such as Mr. Schiffman's Chemistry, and the Mechanical Laboratory. We were tempted to take a few days off and go on a spree to the Paramount, but thirst for knowledge invariably led us back to the straight and narrow. And so we plodded along, and with the work we had our moments of joy. Can we ever forget the fun we had with the exuberant Mr. Seidler? These days will forever remain with us as a happy memory.

"Our Day" finally arrived. With a rush to the G. O. store, we purchased our senior buttons, which signified our right to be the freshmen's terror. But during that brief and anxious wait for our cherished diplomas, we ourselves were terrorized by Mr. Ward's terrible "black squares." However, a change came over the class. We no longer delighted in paper aeronautics and other diversions, for trying times had struck. It was with sorrow and pride that we watched our friends leave one by one for the wars.

We will long remember our Alma Mater, and its patient teachers who gave us light for the darkness of our ignorance. We will never forget our classmates who will be fellow comrades-in-arms, co-workers in the construction of a free, happy world, and fellow citizens in its most wonderful country.

Boatbuilding

IN DEEP SILENCE we entered the hallowed halls of East New York on that first September day, happy at last, for our dreams were coming true. These were soon to be shattered by the "Safety Test," that devilishly ingenious torture! Grueling hours dragged by, and then the bell for lunch, a cloud of dust from flying feet, and the long race down the hall to our final goal, the Cafeteria! This set the pattern for weeks to come. Then came weeks filled with the monotony of drawing plans, but soon, as if by magic, our boats began to form. At this time we realized the tremendous opportunities offered to us. We had plenty of wood and tools, and before long each boy had his own room pass.

In the fourth term, we prepared to build bigger and better boats. It was during this term that we completed the racing sailboat which for two weeks shared top billing with the auto chassis in the lobby. We also had our first experience at decking, which we did very well.

Fifth term found us transferred to the advanced shop where we started drawing plans which we completed just in time for the shift back to our old shop.

Returned to the advanced shop in the sixth term, we laid out the plans for two sixteen-foot canoes which we were lucky enough to pass on to the next class. Some of us worked on the thirty-foot Cabin Cruiser; this gave us a chance to try our skill at cabinet-making. We made panels, hatches, bulkheads and bunks (the less ambitious got plenty of practice trying out the bunks!)

Seniors at last! The first day at school found us all at the G. O. store. What for? Why, to buy senior buttons, of course! Being seniors must have done something for us—we had 100% G. O. for the first time, and in addition, we more than doubled our War Bond quota. Our shop seemed enormous this term because of the absence of the cruiser.

Work, work, work! For the first time in ages everyone worked, even the confirmed loafers. The green and orange and white strips on the efficiency chart must have done the trick. That is one of the things we'll never forget, along with Mr. Tritschler's immortal words, "Who has my keys?" and the ready reply, "Look in your pocket."

Beauty Culture

AT LAST the moment to which we have been looking forward for the past four years has come. It has been a long, hard struggle, but on this day of memories we are all very happy because we have reached our goal. From the very first day of our freshman year we have grown physically and mentally, for we have had an excellent education.

The Beauty Culture girls are proud to hold the title of "Morale Builders." We have undertaken the important task of keeping women beautiful and of taking the places of those beauticians who have entered the service. In other ways, too, we have not been idle or content to let the war take its own course. Our girls have participated in many drives for the Red Cross, National War Fund, collection of clothing and scrap. We also have a group of blood donors.

Years from now when we look back over our school days for memories of the past, many pleasant ones will flash before us. There will be the trip to Central Park to see the War Exhibit from which we learned much about the actual conditions of warfare and what situations our brothers and friends are meeting.

Our fifth term English work included a "Who's Who" autobiography project which was most enjoyable and through which we were able to know more about our schoolmates. In the sixth term we learned more about our city by preparing an interesting booklet called "Around New York with the 6-7-8 BC." This was presented to the library for the use of the students.

We shall never forget our "History of Hair Styles," a combined project of the English and history departments. It required work on our part, but it was worth every second, for it inspired us to do more research and also better hair styling.

Other highlights in our four years were our visit to the Pennsylvania Hotel to see the exhibit of hair styling sponsored by the Hairdressers' Association, and the demonstrations of cold wave permanents, hair dyeing, and hair styling given in our school by well-known cosmetic firms. Last but not least, our graduate theater party on May 18, to see "Dear Ruth" will stand out in our memories.

We have enjoyed every minute of our stay in East New York and will always look back upon it as the happiest four years of our lives. Because of the fine help received from the faculty, we feel we can take our places in the serious life of our large community as patriotic and efficient citizens.

RETREAT . . .

IN HIS never-ending struggle with reality, man seeks a haven where, if but for a rapturous moment or two, his troubled mind, his weary body, and his unsatisfied soul may be at complete ease. In this place of seclusion he mediates. Here, with undying courage and determination, he strives to perfect his environment, with a prayer that his God will prevent man's selfish will from adding further havoc to the world.

Only in retreat can he find a haven. The retreat may be only a quiet bench in the park, but to its patronizer, it becomes a throne where the endless drama of life is brought before him. In his retreat he erects a barrier against time, he finds strength to believe in the ability of human nature, he cleanses himself of his egotistic greed, and he refreshes his mind with happy and pleasant thoughts.

In this realm truth prevails. With a body that is worth but little chemically, he yearns for a full, abundant life for himself and his fellow men, and he realizes the wealth his

God and country offer. He delights in the goodness, beauty, and truths that are found everywhere. Spring to him is proof of a new world after a long gray winter. In his retreat, he discovers that little things make life understandable. And lastly, he possesses exuberant inward peace with his discovery that the only true point in the universe is God, and he pivots his life, dreams and ideals from that point.

But he is not satisfied. He must generously abandon his haven for the reality of adding his contribution to the construction of a new world, for his soul cries out to weld what man's injustice has fractured, and until that is done he can have no rest.

He launches his ideals gently, broadcasting them, until, fanned by his fellow man's approval, they are transformed into a gale and then into a tempest, sweeping with relentless fury, unyieldingly, until they have cleared a road of progress that will lead men to their goal.

Philip Mancuso, 8MS1

A SOLDIER'S DREAM . . .

A soldier dreams when he's alone,
Of sights and sounds and loves of home,
Of laughing, singing, having fun,
The happy little things he'd done.
And now, so many miles away,
The scenes crowd in, in bright array,
Until all blend with a dazzling whirl,
In the sweet smile of that one girl.

A sudden noise—a deaf'ning crash—
Like thunder's roar and lightning's flash,
A grim reality blasts his dream.
In the distance a rising scream
Recalls those bitter words so well;
It tells in truth that "War is Hell."

His thoughts return now, more and more,
To dwell on aims he's fighting for.
The first to conquer fear and pain,
Then live those dreams of home again.

Michael Boccio, 8AV1

Last Will and Testament

We, the graduates, being of unsound mind and faulty reasoning, bequeath to those who have humored us and helped us so much in the past a wealth of imagination which consists of the following:

To Mr. Gold and the Staff: Our appreciation for the long hours of work they have put into our yearbook

To Miss Kiernan: Our gratitude for her wise guidance

To the Student Court: A copy of "The Ox-Bow Incident"

To Mr. Gellert: The colds we got from believing in his fair weather predictions

To Miss Williamson: An air pump to inflate the girls' flat notes

To Miss Heenan: A time-clock for her girls

To Mr. Seidler: A purple tie with yellow stripes

To Mr. Schott: Five years of snow—in fact, a new Ice Age

To Mrs. Conner: Another era of Egyptian Hair Styles

To Mr. Tritschler: A forty-foot key chain

To Mr. Izzi: Our deepest thanks and gratitude for the most enjoyable times we had in E.N.Y.

To Miss Trachtenberg: A 1938 map of Europe in good condition

To Mr. Kramer: A water-proof, shock-proof, repair-proof watch

To Mrs. Wray: Some mechanical ripping machines for time saving

To the Guidance Department: An electric pen that signs excuse notes

To Mr. Stevenson and Faculty: We leave EAST NEW YORK.

To this Last Will and Testament we hereby affix our signature

Students from Seventy-one
Schools Hold Meeting on Nation's Post-War Problems

Approximately four hundred students from seventy-one New York schools attended a conference at Columbia University last night. The theme of the conference was "The Post-War World." The conference was presented by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. The conference was held in the East Room of the United Nations Secretariat Building. The conference was opened by Mr. John B. Connelley, director of the United Nations Secretariat Building. The conference was attended by students from the following schools: [List of schools follows]

$2,000 DONATED TO N. Y. WAR FUND

East New York Vocational High School collected a total of almost $2,000 for the New York City War Fund, Mr. Martin Kramer announced. This represents the amounts contributed by both annexes and the main building.

"We far exceeded our last term's figures," said Mr. Kramer. "The boys showed their willingness to do their part to help the war victims as best they could. He expressed the hope that the students would continue their cooperation in the future."

Student Court
As Office

A very efficient looking group of young men took their place in Room 117 on Friday afternoon. Between them and you is another body of men who are in incognito and who are known as "our weaker and less capable" members of East New York, who will be tried by a jury of their peers in a speedy, public trial.

The former group consisted of temporary officers of the newly instituted Student Court, taken from the general Organization Council members. The jury was chosen from the student body—any G. O. member could qualify. The jury was chosen from the student body—any G. O. member could qualify. The jury was chosen from the student body—any G. O. member could qualify.

The trial had "force" behind it in the form of Mr. William P. Migge, faculty supervisor of the Student Court. The culprits were brought up on such charges as Cafeteria irregularities, leaving the building without authority, infractions of school rules and regulations, etc. Penalties included one, two, or three weeks' probation, the calling of parents to the school, or

The fifteen boys who qualified for the A.S.T.R.P. and the Air Combat Crew Program are: Isidore Chaushe, 8E11; Dominich Crisculo, 8E12; Bernard Herman, 8E11; Jerry Keitel, 8E11; Bernard Lack, 8E11; Thomas McEntee, 8E11; Fredrich Petriano, 8E11; Dominich Rogulo, 8E12; Fred Weiner, 8E11; George Abitante, 8E12; Ralph Chalom, 8E12; John Christie, 8AV1; Joseph Burg, 8AV1; Benjamin Khalaf, 8AV2, and Edward Pims, 8E12.

Each girl is assigned to a particular class. She collects all of its salvage material, from old nylon stockings to used letter paper, and keeps an account of contributions. She also tries to recruit new members for the Corps. Besides having the satisfaction of doing a patriotic job, Victory Corps girls also are given credit for their service on their permanent record cards.

JOURNEY THROUGH EAST NEW YORK

FOUR YEARS AGO we entered East New York. Four years! It seems such a short time, and yet here we are, ready to leave. As in old age, scenes of youth return. Memories of our freshman days rush upon us.

The Herkimer Street Annex was "out of this world" in every sense of those words! Each day we climbed those endless stairways to the third floor. Each day we groaned and grumbled. Each day we were pacified with the thoughts of the main building, for soon we would ride in elevators just as the seniors did (so we were told). Why, some of us had already purchased our elevator passes in preparation for that day. Oh, but ignorance is bliss—and we were blisters!

In September, 1942, we were transferred to the main building, and we felt suavely sophisticated when we replied that we were third termers to the inquiries of some elderly people. We have since learned that those people were the omnipotent seniors.

December 7, 1941 had come and gone, but so far the war had not yet seemed to touch us. The attack on Pearl Harbor, however, had not only changed the course of events of our country but had also changed drastically the country's entire educational system.

We took definite war courses to prepare us for the future. We were given Red Cross instructions in the art of First Aid. We bandaged and splinted each other energetically. We were also asked to participate in the pleasant bone-breaking Health Education activity, "Commando Tactics."

Then there was a Service Honor Roll placed in the lobby to remind us of the boys in the service who were fighting for us. We also felt the loss of many of our teachers to the services, but the vision of the safer and more secure world for which they were fighting helped to compensate for our loss.

But life still had its light side. We considered ourselves "sharp" in those days. With sloppy sweaters and dirty saddles we were right in there "diggin' the jive." But that was mild. Because then came the zoot suits. They were really something! Why, if your pants weren't pegged to 12 inches and your key chain didn't trip you every time you took a step you just weren't "hep."

The musical trend was one of the main factors that influenced our clothing fad. Benny Goodman came out with a really hot rendition of "String of Pearls" and soon that song had each and every female hep cat in town wearing a string of pearls and then — ah, love of the girls' lives — then came Frankie! And with him came the bow ties, bobby socks, "All or Nothing at All," "Sunday, Monday and Always." Ah! Music was so sweet!

As time went on we learned to become sales-resistant to the familiar appeals. For example, here it was the first day of school. No sooner were we seated and relaxed in those soft comfortable seats, than up popped the super-salesman. You heard, "Join the G. O." or "Wouldn't you like to go to the baseball game? Just think, a dime will do it." It was not that we were lacking in school spirit, for there is no one among us who wouldn't do or die for dear old E. N. Y., but we were financially embarrassed.

This was life at East New York. We shall miss the smells around the shop, the squeaks and the booms of the band tuning up, and the teachers' constant "Leave by the front door." We shall miss all the good times. Although we didn't suspect it at the time, even the hard work was fun. We never thought we'd see the day, but here it is. We're going to miss our old E. N. Y.!
